The Pittsburg Journal relates the fol lowing anecdote of McConnell, within a few years a member of Congress from Alabama. It is true just as related:

McConnell, then a member of Congress. stood at the bar of one of the large hotels in Washington; beside him and drinking with him, was one who without a virtuous or generous feeling, had enjoyed all the advantages of exalted family and great wealth; advantages which his innate and ungovernable vices had to a great extent forfeited. He was shunned by the good; but McConnell had long since left the choice of his companions to chance. and then chance was untoward. The individual referred to spoke of the Bible; sneered at its authority, ridiculed its injunctions, repeated the most sacred passages with ribbald com-ments. McConnell, who had been all excitement and exhiteration, stood silently and sadly by without a word of remark. The blasphemer continued, in language more and more offensive, and it was remarked that the eye of McConnell flashed with unwonted fire, and his cheek flushed with even a deeper glow than plantics, Wines, &c. Those that are fond of a pure that which disspination had fixed there. At article for sickness will please call at length he stepped forward and said:

"Stop my friend. From the moment I first looked you in the face I feared you were a scoundrel, for God had set the mark of Cain upon your forehead .- I now know it, I am a bad man, a lost man; a man, every moment of whose life upbraids him. But I have one green spot still left on my heart, I love my wife, and my wife loves the Bible.
